A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

DEAR BEREA ALUMNI & FRIENDS,

“We aspire to excellence in all we do in service to more than 1,600 students who otherwise would not be able to afford college. We give them our best, and they return the favor year after year.”

I am pleased to present the 2018-19 President's Report on Philanthropy and commend it for your review. This report details our strong financial position and conveys information pertaining to our sources of fiscal support. Our financial position remains strong thanks to sound management of our endowment and the continued support of friends, alumni and even current students through various giving programs. This report also includes some stories of persons whose generosity has enabled Berea College to sustain its mission of transformative impact in the lives of so many.

Our beloved institution received a long list of national accolades over the past year. For a fourth straight year, Washington Monthly named Berea College one of the nation's top liberal arts schools. Kiplinger's Personal Finance recognized Berea students as carrying the lowest average debt at graduation. Berea appeared in three Princeton Review publications this year, The Best 385 Colleges, The Best Value Colleges, and Colleges That Pay You Back. If these weren't enough, in addition to the U.S. State Department's Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs naming Berea College as a top-producing institution of Gilman Scholars, the Wall Street Journal/Times Higher Education recently ranked us the No. 1 best-value college in the country.

This fall we celebrated one year of using the new Margaret A. Cargill Natural Sciences and Health building (MAC), our state-of-the-art facility made possible by the generosity of our beloved Berea community of donors. NASA astronaut Mae Jemison spoke at the dedication, and last spring we established a display of the Nobel Prize in Chemistry awarded to Dr. John Fenn '37, with his family in attendance. Most recently, the U.S. Green Building Council verified MAC as having achieved Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design (LEED) Gold certification while the Forest Stewardship Council awarded it the Full Project Certification, which recognizes ecologically responsible wood construction.

We are grateful for such praise and recognition, but what is truly amazing is that this long list of achievements is not nearly all we do at Berea College. Over the life of this college, we have endeavored not just to provide a simply adequate experience, or an education considered merely on par with other schools, but to aspire to excellence in all we do in service to more than 1,600 students who otherwise would not be able to afford college. We give them our best, and they return the favor year after year. This school's consistent devotion to excellence is what makes me most proud.

And you, dear friends, are the ones who make that happen. Together, you rose to meet last year's Berea Fund goal of $4.7 million. I am confident that we can count on you this year to meet a goal of $4.825 million, or the amount necessary to cover the tuition gap for our students. You'll be joining more than 1,000 students who have already begun their philanthropic lives by supporting their alma mater before they even graduate.

My great thanks to them and to you, who make this truly singular institution a reality.

Lyle D. Roelofs
President

A MESSAGE FROM THE DIVISION OF ALUMNI & COLLEGE RELATIONS

DEAR BEREA ALUMNI & FRIENDS,

“We are most excited each year to introduce you to fellow Bereans whose stories of philanthropy perhaps echo your own. No matter your story, we are grateful that it brings you back to Berea year after year.”

Together with all of you, we are privileged to support students in every phase of this transformative journey they are experiencing here at Berea College. You not only help us complete tuition promise scholarships for every student, your gifts help bring renowned speakers to campus, give study abroad experiences and keep our campus beautiful. We could not do this work without each and every one of you. Thank you.

As a tangible expression of our gratitude, we are pleased to share news of two wonderful initiatives.

As you read through this President’s Report on Philanthropy, linger a while on pages 8 through 17 to learn about five new lifetime giving societies we have established to commemorate the legacy of largesse to Berea College. Each society—recognizing gifts from $50,000 to $1 million—is named for historical figures who left a significant impression on Berea and beyond. The Julia Britton Hooks Society salutes the College’s second African American graduate (1874) and first African American faculty member. She went on to advocate for women’s suffrage, civil rights and education throughout Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee. The Loyal Jones Society honors the founding director of the College’s Appalachian Center and a writer whose work focuses on educating others about the resilient people, rich history and diverse culture of the Appalachian region.

The Matilda Fee Society, named for the wife of Berea College founder John G. Fee, both staunch abolitionists who partnered to establish the town of Berea in 1853 and Berea College in 1855. The Carter G. Woodson Society recalls the 1903 Berea graduate who was one of the first scholars of African American history. His research earned him the moniker “father of black history.” The College’s Center for Interracial Education bears his name.

Our fifth giving society is the John G. Fee Society, named for the abolitionist minister and visionary founder of Berea College who risked his life and his family for the cause of educating blacks and whites, men and women, together in the foothills of Appalachia. We are so pleased to introduce these lifetime giving societies to highlight the longevity of our supporters’ generosity.

And finally, we are pleased to recognize one of our most inspirational alumna—M. Elizabeth Culbreth ’64. A longtime attorney and Berea College trustee (Board Chair 2002 to 2008), Culbreth began giving to Berea College more than 50 years ago. Now, the society that carries her name recognizes the steadfast alumni and friends of Berea who have given for five or more consecutive years.

Beyond the lists, we are most excited each year to introduce you to fellow Bereans whose stories of philanthropy perhaps echo your own. No matter your story, we are grateful that it brings you back to Berea year after year.

Gratefully,

The Division of Alumni and College Relations

JOHN G. FEE SOCIETY

An abolitionist who opposed the American caste system, Reverend John G. Fee moved from northern Kentucky to establish the town of Berea in 1853. Two years later, he opened a one-room school that would eventually become Berea College, the first interracial and coeducational college in the South. Who could imagine a more challenging mission than founding and defending an institution devoted to abolitionism and interracial education in the antebellum South? Fee and his family faced numerous threats and dangers. The school was closed for a time as armed conflict swept across Kentucky, but it re-opened in 1866 as the Berea Literary Institute open to students of all races.

Fee's vision, social conscience and hard work are the legacy upon which Berea College is built. His message of impartial love and equality of all people was the guiding principle of the College, and the founding motto still stands today: "God has made of one blood all peoples of the earth" (Acts 17:26).

CARTER G. WOODSON SOCIETY

Carter G. Woodson was one of the first scholars to study African American history. After earning a bachelor's degree in literature from Berea College in 1903, he continued his education at the University of Chicago and went on to earn a doctoral degree in history from Harvard in 1912, the second ever awarded by that institution to an African American. The first African American to earn a Ph.D. was W. E. B. Du Bois 17 years earlier. Woodson dedicated his life to historical research and pioneered a weeklong observance of African American history in 1926, which eventually evolved into the nation's annual celebration of Black History Month. A journalist, Woodson founded the Association for the Study of African American Life and History and its publication the Journal of Negro History. He is rightly known as "the father of black history." Named in his honor, the Carter G. Woodson Center for Interracial Education on Berea's campus serves to promote and guide the College's historic commitment to interracial education.

MATILDA FEE SOCIETY

A committed abolitionist and egalitarian from Bracken County, Ky., Matilda Fee partnered with her husband, Reverend John G. Fee, to establish the town of Berea in 1853 and Berea College in 1855. Confronted by angry townspeople and rising tensions, her iconic bravery in the face of danger and resistance helped forge a path to interracial education in slave-holding Madison County. That dedication to the mission of Berea College allowed it to grow from a one-room schoolhouse to the institution we know today. In the College's early years, she served as the head of the Ladies' Board of Care, which supervised the social lives of female students. Her life was characterized by prayer and service to others.

LOYAL JONES SOCIETY

$100,000

After earning his bachelor's degree in English from Berea College in 1954, Loyal Jones served as the founding director for the College's Appalachian Center. The Center now bears his name in recognition of his leadership from 1970 to 1993 and his contributions to the field of Appalachian studies. Throughout his career, he has focused on writing and educating others about Appalachian people, history and culture. A prolific writer, Jones has published dozens of articles and nine books concerning the Appalachian region and its people. A common theme of his writing is the resiliency of mountain people. A well-loved figure at Berea College, despite his recent move to North Carolina, his work continues to impact today's Appalachian studies curriculum.

JULIA BRITTON HOOKS SOCIETY

$50,000

Berea College alumna Julia Britton Hooks was a gifted musician and a tireless advocate for justice, equality and educational opportunity. During her time at Berea, she studied and taught music, and is credited as the second African American female to graduate (1874) and Berea's first African American faculty member. Her love of education, music and public service was instilled in her at a young age by her mother. Motivated by the poor quality public education available to black youth in Kentucky, Hooks worked to create and promote opportunities for these students. Later, that steadfast commitment to education in the region led her to serve communities in Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee as an educator and a champion of many causes, including women's suffrage and civil rights. She is the grandmother of Benjamin Hooks, former director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

OUR STORIES OF SACRIFICE & SUCCESS

Every year, Berea College celebrates with more than 300 graduates who successfully complete their degrees and move on to further their education, fulfill career aspirations, serve communities around the globe and share their Berea experience with a broader world. And every year we are delighted to share the stories of faithful donors whose support makes it possible for these students to change the trajectory of theirs and their families' lives. Here, we share stories of alumni who fulfill their ambitions and gratefully support the next generation of Berea students to follow in their footsteps. We reveal stories of happenstance where strangers find their way to Berea and are so moved by the people, values and mission they become supportive friends for life. We herald the faithful stories of those whose families have been supporting and serving Berea for decades. Each story and each gift weaves together to create a beautiful image of endurance, sacrifice and success.

Inheriting a Legacy of Generosity and Service

by Kim Brown

Stephanie Bowling Zeigler was born into an appreciation of Berea College. The youngest of James and Ann Bowling's four children, she grew up in Connecticut amidst crafts created in Berea—an homage to her parents' Kentucky roots.

"When I was born, my father was beginning his 30 years of service on the Board of Trustees; he had quite a philanthropic nature," she recalled. "From a very early age, I was playing with the woodcraft toys and seeing weavings around the house and other crafts and ceramics made by Berea students."

Berea College woodcraft games like Fox and Geese, Nine Men's Morris and Chinese Checkers—"the one with the solid-colored marbles was a personal favorite," she remembers—connected Zeigler to the College. Growing up, she recalls her father talking about Berea and taking trips to Kentucky for board meetings and the two of them staying at Boone Tavern on a visit to Berea. With Berea as a part of her upbringing and culture at home, she naturally grew up and into a seat on the Board of Trustees, as well.

"When I was young, I was not aware of how incredible the school was and the profound impact of its mission," Zeigler admits. "After my father passed away, my mother was elected to the board, and I would hear her talk about how remarkable it was and the difference Berea was making through the extraordinary mission we all know well."

When her mother retired from the board, then-President Larry Shinn invited Zeigler to join.

"It has been one of the greatest honors in my life," she said.

As an adult and being on the Board, I have come to know Berea in a much deeper way. Every time I go to a meeting, it enriches my love and respect for the College.

Zeigler, an architect, also takes great pride in the Margaret A. Cargill Natural Sciences and Health building. As chairperson of the board's buildings and grounds committee during its construction, the committee—which includes fellow architect Bill Richardson—worked with the school to create a building that respected the campus' historical architecture while offering design and functionality for the 21st century. Opened in 2018, the building exterior recalls the past with its contextual brickwork and cupola. The interior core reads "modern" with glass walls and classrooms that facilitate collaboration among the science disciplines and the top-rated nursing program housed there.

"My gift to that building was the biggest gift I've ever given, so that was significant for me," Zeigler said. "I definitely felt a great sense of pride in being part of that time period for the school."

That gift enabled Zeigler, her husband Eric and their children to name the Zeigler Family Simulation Room in memory of James Chandler Bowling, her father.

Berea College is etched onto Zeigler's heart. "As an adult and being on the Board, I have come to know Berea in a much deeper way," she said. "Every time I go to a meeting, it enriches my love and respect for the College."

It's a love she may have passed to her three children when she wrapped them in baby blankets woven in Student Crafts.

MONROE PEELER

A Member of the Family

By Jason Lee Miller

The story of Monroe Peeler and Berea College is incomplete without telling the story of his grandfather, John William Bate, who was born into slavery on a farm near Louisville. Emancipated with his family during the Civil War, Bate struggled in poverty until he followed a favorite teacher to Berea College. The quiet Christian campus was a switch from Louisville's more indecorous tobacco industry where he had been laboring, but he said the "personal kindness and unselfish devotion of the faculty" endeared him to continuing his education.

John Bate graduated in 1881 and took over a one-room schoolhouse for African American children in nearby Danville, Ky. He transformed what became the Bate School into a proper educational facility serving 600 students, and he presided as principal for 59 years, retiring at age 85.

"I have just sketchy images of sitting on his knee when I was 4 or 5," Peeler said. "My mother brought me to Danville to see him."

That was just a short time before Bate died in 1945. Berea College was recognized throughout Peeler's upbringing as the key institution in the transformation of Bate's life and the subsequent opportunities his family enjoyed.

"There is a real sensitive connection," he said, "a real sense of family around Berea and the people who have attended. It's a very comforting feeling to be a part of it."

Peeler grew up in Greensboro, N.C., challenged both by segregation and the social concerns of being the son of a school principal and a school teacher in the days of the birth of rock 'n' roll. He played in a band and went off to Kent State University to study architecture before switching to business. After graduating, he joined Lubrizol Corporation near Cleveland.

Though a businessman throughout the year, Peeler took up motorcycling and spent nine summers, from 1969 to 1978, riding across North America. In the mid-1980s, he was recruited to a new role at Lubrizol, finally putting his architecture skills to work by designing office spaces across the nation. Peeler eventually retired from Lubrizol and began a new career of investing, at which he has been very successful.

Peeler's success in business motivates him to support Berea College students who are business minded, like the students involved in the Motley Fool Investment Club, which manages a sizable stock portfolio earmarked for the College endowment.

"We need people who understand investing, the importance of it," Peeler said. "I think as we go forward, we really need to connect with that in a very positive way and have people coming out who want to grow our economy."

In addition, Peeler wants to help others the way he was helped. "I worked for things, but doors were opened, and you want to do the same thing for other people," he said. "Berea's mission is compelling because it reaches out to the underserved and selects those who are most deserving of an education."

Peeler also praises the College's emphasis on work ethic and believes that personal trait, in combination with assistance from others, can create positive outcomes. A positive outcome for him is knowing his name will appear on the Berea College Legacy Wall, which lists all the people who have named Berea in their estate plans.

"I feel good about the connection to Berea College," Peeler admitted. "I look at my life, what I value, and I want to do those things that are inspirational and business focused. Berea College really meets all of those."

DR. DELPHINA HOPKINS-GILLISPIE & CHARLEY GILLISPIE

Giving Access to Hope

By Michele Pekola

Growing up in Greenville, S.C., Dr. Delphina (Del) Hopkins-Gillispie '73 was encouraged by family, clergymen and teachers to attend college. While she applied to several historically black colleges, her high school guidance counselor spoke with her about Berea College. The idea of attending a college that was diverse, open to minorities and required no tuition was impressive to Hopkins-Gillispie.

The opportunity to attend a college that embraced diversity was a privilege and great opportunity.

"The first day my parents drove me to campus, I said, 'Wow, what a beautiful place,'" Hopkins-Gillispie recalled. "The love, the friendliness on campus—the Berea family welcomed me with open arms."

A strong commitment to Berea's mission came to fruition when she began life after college and reflected on all she had received at Berea.

"The education, life experiences, wonderful professors and cultural experiences were phenomenal," Hopkins-Gillispie said.

As a first-generation, African American female majoring in biology, Hopkins-Gillispie says she defines her success as a genuine love for learning. She knows that she did not get to this place by herself. There were others who mentored her and provided the gift of the no-tuition promise.

Hopkins-Gillispie and her husband, Charley Gillispie MBA, CPA, are strong supporters of Berea's mission and Great Commitments.

"I know that affordability of college through funding such as an endowment for equitable access to higher education is a motivating factor in academic attainment for students from disadvantaged backgrounds," Hopkins-Gillispie said.

She truly believes in all aspects of Berea's mission and says, "The mission statement is like a puzzle; each piece joins another to make a strong institutional commitment with a solid foundation based on principles that date back to the 1800s and reflect the quality of today's generation of students who graduate from Berea."

While her husband did not attend Berea College, he has known about the College for years. His father, who was a farmer and construction worker, helped to build several of the buildings on campus.

"I feel that Berea is preparing students to become leaders in church and society who understand what it is to treat others as we want to be treated," Charley Gillispie said. "Del and I believe our support of Berea will make this a better world for future generations."

These values led the couple to establish the Delphina Hopkins-Gillispie, Ph.D. Endowment Fund, and a deferred charitable gift annuity, which will ensure support of Berea's students in perpetuity.

A former chief financial officer of a higher learning institution, Gillispie said, "The fact that students can obtain their degree from Berea without incurring a large amount of debt makes it possible for many more students to be contributing members of society in the future."

Hopkins-Gillispie notes that Berea laid the foundation—academically; spiritually; and by way of instilling self-discipline, leadership and service. She says that being able to recognize the importance of education, forward thinking and obtaining an education, like the one she obtained at Berea, can change the direction of a person's life, his or her family and even the community.

"Just think, if everyone paid it forward what a better world it would be," Hopkins-Gillispie said.

THE PEARL FOUNDATION

Serving Something Bigger

By Michele Pekola

According to Janis Ian, creator of the hit song, "At Seventeen," everybody deserves a chance. That's why the Grammy-award-winning singer and songwriter and her spouse, Patricia Snyder, cofounded the Nashville-based Pearl Foundation. Named after Ian's mother, Pearl, the foundation provides scholarship funds to students who may otherwise not have the opportunity to attend college.

Pearl's fondest dream in life was to attend college, which she did after supporting her brother and then her husband through college, raising a family and being diagnosed with multiple sclerosis. The day Pearl received her degree was the proudest day of her life, Ian said.

Supporting students in their higher-education endeavors has always been equally important to Ian. Initially, the Foundation provided support solely to Goddard College, Pearl's alma mater. After learning about all that Berea has to offer and the people the College serves, Snyder expressed to Ian that they should grow their support and endow schools that are doing great work serving students who need scholarship funds. The couple learned more about Berea through their friend, singer-songwriter Billy Edd Wheeler '55, and Bonnie Campbell '77, who was a student of Snyder's at the Center for Human Development in Nashville, a private experimental school in the 1970s.

Berea is very much in my heart.

"There are so many different threads that intertwine my life, Pat's life and Berea," Ian said.

As a result, the Foundation has been a strong supporter of Berea College and its mission for nearly 15 years.

"Berea is very much in my heart," Ian said. "There are just so many factors that have influenced us. The fact that Berea was the first integrated college in the South was huge."

Ian's parents were both active in the civil rights movement, and she says Berea stands for a lot of the things in which she and Snyder believe.

The number of international students Berea serves also is of great importance to them as their Foundation receives donations from around the world. During a campus visit, they experienced firsthand the enthusiasm and gratefulness of international students with whom they engaged.

The Pearl Foundation initially raised funds through an online auction supported by Ian's fans, as well as direct support from the couple. They have been selfless and creative in their efforts to raise Foundation funds from online auctions, sale of personal items, private concerts and even tip jars at concert events.

"I think our little foundation shows what you can do if you think outside of the box," Ian said. "If you can spend your life in service to something bigger than yourself, you are fortunate, indeed."

The Elizabeth Culbreth Society July 1, 2018–June 30, 2019

Berea Trustee M. Elizabeth Culbreth '64 began giving back to her alma mater in 1965. Her faithfulness and love of Berea inspire us—that's why we want to recognize all those who make consecutive gifts to Berea by welcoming them into the Elizabeth Culbreth Society. Names listed fall in these exact year categories. Other Elizabeth Culbreth Society members are designated with an asterisk throughout the publication.

After opening convocation, the Alumni and College Relations division hosted a celebration on the Quad in recognition of its fourth annual Giving Day festivities. Bounce houses, games and a picnic lunch allowed for employee families and students with families to enjoy an afternoon together.

The 1855 Club July 1, 2018–June 30, 2019

The 1855 Club is named for the founding of our great College and these generous friends and alumni are foundational to our current operations. Each year, these gifts represent 55% of the Berea Fund, providing critical gap funding to help us meet the need not met by the endowment.

The 1855 Club - Platinum Level July 1, 2018–June 30, 2019

The 1855 Club's Platinum Level includes gifts of $25,000 and above.

2018-19 Internships

In the 2018-19 academic year, 281 students, representing 32 majors, participated in internship experiences in 34 states/territories and eight countries. Of those students, 83 percent received full or partial funding from the Berea College Office of Internships. Generous gifts from our donors, friends and alumni make these life- and career-altering internships a reality for hundreds of Berea students each year. Here is a sneak peek into just a handful of our student internship experiences this past summer.

Ronnie Sloan (Senior)
Major: Sustainability and Environmental Studies
Remediation Internship
Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation (TEDC). Nashville, Tenn.

Mallory Tenge (Junior)
Major: Agriculture and Natural Resources
Permaculture Internship
Kealahou, Hawaii

Rachel Starnes (Sophomore)
Major: Education Studies
Girls Empowerment Internship
Starfish International. The Gambia, Africa

Gabriella Epley (Sophomore)
Major: Spanish
Law, Ethics and Society Internship
Restorative Justice. Louisville, Ky.

“I would not have been able to do this internship without funding from Berea. For small nonprofit organizations like Restorative Justice Louisville, paying a full-time intern would not be possible.”

“My internship was particularly helpful because I was able to conduct informational interviews with people in various positions in the criminal justice system. I was able to learn about their jobs, which helped me refine my career pathway. Because I got to ask real attorneys, judges and caseworkers about their careers, I was able to make decisions about what I want to do with my own life.”

Zoe Cowley (Junior)
Major: African and African American Studies
University of Kentucky Libraries Internship
Louie B. Nunn Center for Oral History. Lexington, Ky.

Anne Otieno (Junior)
Major: Computer and Information Science
Global Technology Support Internship
Google. New York, N.Y.

“There’s no way I would have been able to afford to go to New York and intern as a wedding photographer without funding from Berea College. This was so important to me because during my time there, I discovered I wanted to have a career in wedding photography.”

Major: Biology
Optometry Internship
King's Eye Care. Berea, Ky.

Toby Adejumo (Junior)
Major: Computer and Information Science
Wedding Photographer Internship
Jay Lim Studio. New York, N.Y.

SABINA SABAL

Helping Others Like Herself

By Jason Lee Miller

Sabina Sabal '22 is aiming for a job with the World Health Organization, and she's studying neuroscience and mental health in order to get there.

"I always had an interest in the nervous system, but when I turned about 13, I started to look more into mental health issues."

Sabal is a first-generation American whose parents migrated from the Garifuna area of Belize. The Garifuna are descendants from West Africans who shipwrecked in the Caribbean in the 17th century and were subsequently exiled to Honduras before settling in Belize.

"We are a small group of people," Sabal said, "and we have a really cool history."

From Cary, N.C., Sabal was referred to Berea by a teacher who believed she should look beyond the local community college and seek a four-year degree. Though she was skeptical at first that a no-tuition college existed without a catch, she decided to apply.

"I looked up Berea College," she recalls, and thought, "that is not true. There is definitely something attached to it." I kept researching for about a week and found out how it actually worked, so I said okay and took all my tests."

It worked out for Sabal, and though she describes her first year as difficult, she has settled comfortably into her sophomore year, and is reaching out to first-year students who may struggle like she did.

"I know more what to expect, and I see freshmen going through the things I went through. I want people to be able to be happy and figure out their life here. My experience gives insight about what advice to give."

I want people to be able to be happy and figure out their life here. My experience gives insight about what advice to give.

Seeing herself in other people is important to Sabal, and the focus on diversity at Berea has helped her in that respect.

"I love the diversity at Berea College," she said. "I love meeting people like me because I didn't have that back home."

The College's community helps Sabal feel that she belongs. "Everyone here is trying to help you," she said. "They genuinely care. You're never really alone. Even if you're sitting alone in the dining hall, people ask if you're okay, if you want them to sit with you. It's nice to have a sense of community."

That sense of community is why Sabal, who participates in the Student Philanthropy Council and volunteers with Habitat for Humanity, decided to begin her philanthropic life by supporting Berea College as a Berea Patron. In the process, she returns a portion of her Labor earnings back to the College. Even as a student, she is paying it forward.

"This college really does feel like a dream," she said. "It's hard to believe that we can come here with no tuition. Without Berea, low-income students wouldn't be given a chance."

DAVID SCHULTZ

Commitment to Do Good

By Abbie Tanyhill Darst '03

David Schultz '41 was born in North Dakota and raised in Berea, Ky., as the son of an industrial arts professor and a Baptist missionary. While Schultz's father, Henry Schultz, taught in the Berea College Crafts department, he was enrolled at the Foundation School. When he graduated from the Foundation School, he was ready for a change of scenery and enrolled in Bluffton College in Ohio, where he played football and dreamed of a career in engineering. However, Bluffton was not accredited outside of Ohio and only had one math professor at the time, a situation Schultz once said, "was not ideal for a pre-engineering student."

Schultz returned to Berea College and finished his degree in mathematics and economics in 1941. He went on to earn a master's degree in engineering from the University of Kentucky and was hired at the Tennessee Eastman Company in Oak Ridge, Tenn. A short time later, due to downsizing, Schultz left Oak Ridge and went to work for a mining company in Magoffin County, Ky. Schultz's innate love for learning prompted him to begin a program helping other miners learn to read and write after-hours and on the weekends. Miners would pay $5 to participate, which they earned back after they successfully learned these vital skills.

At the onset of the Korean War, Schultz was approached about returning to Oak Ridge National Laboratories as an engineer, and was selected to work in the ORNL law office. He obtained his law degree and continued working for ORNL for more than 30 years. There, he met his wife, Ann, to whom he was married for 67 years, before she passed away in 2010.

His time at the ORNL legal affairs division was some of the most satisfying work of his career, he told Berea President Lyle Roelofs during a 2013 visit. Schultz "was the happiest when working and doing something new," Roelofs recalled Schultz saying.

Even after a 30-year career with ORNL and serving as president of the Oak Ridge Federal Credit Union, Schultz still was motivated by trying new things. He and Ann traveled to 31 different countries throughout their lives, and he continued broadening his education by completing 34 Great Courses in everything from string theory to linguistics, to Beethoven's symphonies, to Ancient Civilization, to Revelation, noted former gift officer Amy Shehee '91, who worked with Schultz for many years.

"David was a woodworker, painter, investor, engineer, human resource specialist, literary champion, Civil Rights champion, gentleman and a piano player," Shehee wrote about Schultz.

Schultz often emphasized how highly he regarded the mission of Berea College to provide opportunity to smart students with financial need. He believed Berea was changing the world, and that belief led he and Ann to commit their entire estate to Berea College as part of the College's Great Commitments Society. Schultz was savvy with money and had a portfolio that Merrill Lynch used as a template for other retirees. He was fond of saying that he was building and securing his assets so that Berea would receive as much as possible when he died.

This past March, at the age of 98, Schultz passed away, leaving more than $1 million in his estate to Berea College. Schultz said that it was part of his commitment to do some good with his resources. Giving back to the school that gave him his start, and investing in the lives of other students who cannot afford a good education, he said, was the best way for him to serve his country.

DR. CHANNELL BARBOUR

No Longer a Misfit

By Abbie Tanyhill Darst '03

Dr. Channell Barbour '91 always had big plans. Whether it was dreaming of the bright lights and fame awaiting her in California or aspiring to be president of Berea College, her ambition has never been tethered. Barbour grew up a “misfit” in Oldham County, Ky. The youngest of nine children and an African American female in a predominantly white county school, her counselor told her she was not college material and should look instead at cosmetology school.

“But my parents told me I could go to college,” Barbour remembers.

Their belief gave her encouragement, but it took the help of then-Berea College recruiter Virgil Burnside to make it reality. Barbour’s family was familiar with Berea because her mother and oldest sister had attended the Lincoln Institute, an all-black vocational school founded by Berea trustees after the Day Law forced racial segregation in Kentucky schools from 1904 to 1950.

Burnside assured her mother that Berea had a support system that would help her accomplish her goal of earning a college degree.

“If she doesn’t give up on herself, we won’t give up on her,” Barbour recalls Burnside telling her mother. “My mother was so proud to have me come to Berea and graduate.”

Barbour went on to earn a master’s degree in public administration with plans to go to California, be an entertainment lawyer and make lots of money. But her mother had a prophetic vision that she would make a difference in people’s lives through education. And after years of working in state government, Barbour took a position at Indiana University Southeast, advising undecided first-year students and upperclassmen business majors.

“I remembered what Berea College did for me, and I wanted to give back,” Barbour said. “I truly wanted to be the catalyst for these students and help them understand there is hope.”

Her supervisor at IUSE encouraged Barbour to pursue her doctoral degree in higher education leadership, which she completed in 2014. In 2016, her connections to Berea through Burnside and Gus Gerassimides called her back to the College, as Barbour was hired to serve as the associate dean of Student Life. She was promoted to vice president for Student Life this summer after Burnside retired.

“I was excited my alma mater would entertain having me back,” she said. “With the struggles I went through, I knew someone appreciated me, and I have a mission here.”

Beyond helping create great student life experiences, Barbour’s mission extends to other ways of supporting students. She funds a scholarship specifically for political science students’ professional development. Last summer the scholarship supported a student’s internship at the United Nations.

Giving back always has been a priority to Barbour. As a student, she gave $5 of every paycheck she earned back to Berea. After graduating, she increased it to $25 per month.

“My giving as a student was a sign to say, ‘I’m not poor,’” Barbour explained with emotion in her voice. “For all those people who looked down on my mom and dad, to be able to say I could give $5, and I was able to help someone else meant I had made it, and I was no longer a misfit.”

Barbour continues to dream about how she could serve further at Berea College, perhaps even becoming its president someday. Like she experienced under former President John Stephenson and his wife Jane and sees exhibited by current President Lyle Roelofs and First Lady Laurie, she is excited by the impact she could have engaging students in that role.

“I want to say I started as a student to whom people said I couldn’t, and now I get to be encouraging, engaging and help students to be their best,” Barbour said. “How much more impact can I have than in the presidency to continue to help students understand they can be who they want to be as long as they set their minds to it?”

STEVE & JANE ANDERSON

Wonderfully Contagious

By Abbie Tanyhill Darst '03

Steve Anderson’s childhood memory of his mother packing boxes of clothes to send to Berea College for her Daughters of the American Revolution chapter in Texas is his first awareness of the College. It was that vague recollection that made him detour off the interstate for a stop in Berea in 1992 on a trip from Tennessee back to his home in Maryland.

That day, Steve attended a service in Danforth Chapel. The service was good, he recalls, but it was the tremendous hospitality of the Berea College faculty, staff and students that was captivating. Steve ended up staying the night in Berea. When he returned home, what he had learned about this liberal arts college in Kentucky forever impacted his life.

Steve and his wife Jane are graduates of Oberlin College (Ohio)—an institution founded on an interracial education commitment that inspired Berea’s founder John G. Fee, and from where many of Berea’s first teachers and presidents were recruited.

“Part of the attractiveness of Berea is the same as my initial draw to Oberlin,” Steve said. “I was attracted to Oberlin by its motto of ‘Learning and Labor.’ Finding that Berea embraces the values of radical equality and work in an environment shaped by Christian values was a wonderful discovery!”

“That was part of the excitement of sending that first check,” Jane added. “He came home so excited. That check was the beginning of a lifetime commitment for both of us.”

These values have been part of Steve’s life since childhood, when he followed a call into ministry and began at the age of 15 preaching in little East Texas churches. He spent his 45-year career as a minister with the United Church of Christ.

During his first visit, Steve learned Berea was looking for a new president. He immediately called his dear friend, Larry Shinn, whom he had met at Drew Theological seminary. “I told him, ‘You need to go to Berea.’ There was silence on the other end of the line and then Larry responded, ‘You’re the second person this week to tell me this.’ In my mind it was a perfect match between the values and commitments that characterize both Larry and Nancy (Shinn) and Berea.”

Despite his and Jane’s close relationship to the Shinn, Steve is adamant their support has always been about Berea College.

Jane grew up in North Carolina, remembering her grandmother’s home infused with items from Berea—woven plaid blankets, hearth brooms and a handcrafted Skittles game.

“I grew up with the idea that Berea was a special place,” she said.

Jane pursued a teaching career after college. In her first full-time position, she discovered a 10th-grade student in her English class who could not read. That experience shaped a subsequent career helping students with various types of learning disabilities discover paths to successful learning.

“What I particularly appreciate is how carefully Berea considers reasons students may struggle,” Jane said. “Everything from the Macy’s shopping trip for professional clothes, to reaching out to parents who might have concerns about kids missing the next crop, to a personally designed internship—I am inspired by what the College will pursue on a young person’s behalf.”

The Andersons truly believe Berea is an institution of integrity. They have supported the college for 27 years, and each year they embrace again the way Berea lives out its mission and commitment to student success.

“The Great Commitments,” Steve said, “seem to imbue and inspire students, faculty, staff and administrators—everyone—and the result is an entire community reflecting a commitment to something bigger than themselves. It’s wonderfully contagious.”

World AIDS Day takes place on Dec. 1 each year as an opportunity for people worldwide to unite in the fight against HIV. Berea students hosted a fashion show as part of LGBTQ-specific resident-life programs for upper-class and first-year students.

Friends of Berea July 1, 2018–June 30, 2019

* Denotes membership in the Elizabeth Culbreth Society.

Beyond alumni, faculty, staff and students, Berea is honored to have so many individuals committed to supporting the College's mission and values. These individuals encompass diverse passions and motivations for their giving, but their combined philanthropic support allows Berea to maintain its commitment to student access and success.

EMMANUEL & SHARON TUFFUOR

Making it Possible

Tim Jordan '76

Like other college-going students, Emmanuel Tuffuor '88 says coming to Berea College was life changing. As with most students, leaving one's family, home and familiar surroundings behind requires adjustment. For Tuffuor, home was in Ghana—5,485 miles away—meaning he dealt with a lot more change than most Berea students.

"I came to Berea with nothing, just a duffle bag and a few dollars," Tuffuor said.

His father—a tradesman—and his mother had no formal education, but Tuffuor says his mother was very supportive when he was accepted to Berea in 1984.

Tuffuor earned a BA degree in economics and BS degree in business administration, citing Berea economics and business professors Clifford Sowell and Wayne Tolliver as being most influential. Proceeding to graduate school at the University of Georgia, he completed master's degrees in economics and accounting and went on to a successful career in accounting.

Tuffuor worked at accounting firm KPMG in New York for 22 years, where he was a senior partner focused on the Alternative Investment Tax Practice. He previously was associated with Coopers & Lybrand and Deloitte & Touche. Tuffuor was a member of the board of directors of KPMG, partner-in-charge of the Metro New York Alternative Investment Tax Practice and National Industry Tax Leader for the Asset Management Practice. With extensive experience in strategic acquisitions, he served on the due diligence and post-acquisition integration team of KPMG's acquisition of a regional accounting firm.

It is a great honor and privilege to serve such a wonderful and historic institution that has changed so many lives.

Throughout his career, Tuffuor has exemplified Berea's commitment to service by actively participating in professional associations, such as the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Wall Street Tax Association. He also has authored industry-related articles, taught courses on taxation of hedge funds and investment partnerships, and been a panelist at numerous industry seminars.

His success has allowed him to serve his family and his alma mater in various ways. He returns to Ghana twice each year to assist his family. Tuffuor says that one of his other passions is helping Berea College graduates find jobs, something he has done for many students pursuing accounting careers in New York. Earlier this year, he was elected to serve a six-year term on the Berea College Board of Trustees.

"It is a great honor and privilege to serve such a wonderful and historic institution that has changed so many lives," Tuffuor said. "I look forward to serving and contributing to the progress of Berea College and continuing to fulfill the Great Commitments that have made Berea College unique in American education."

His motivation for supporting Berea College financially comes from curiosity about previous benefactors.

"I don't know who made it possible for me, but I want to do that for future students," said Tuffuor, who always encourages other Berea alumni to do the same.

MARY LOU SALTER

Passing it Down the Line

By Jason Lee Miller

Mary Lou Salter '47 had no plans to attend Berea College. And when she arrived she had no intention of staying. A Berea alumna teaching at her school in North Carolina had persuaded her to take the entrance exam. Soon after, a telegram arrived saying there was a reservation for her in nursing class.

Mary Lou accepted the invitation only because she feared she'd be billed for the reservation.

"I didn't unpack for a week," Mary Lou said about her campus arrival. "They asked me when I was going to unpack. I said, 'I'm not staying.'"

To her surprise, she found nursing classes enjoyable, and with World War II raging overseas, the United States had a need for nurses. She attended Berea only a short time before she answered the call to join the U.S. Cadet Nurse Corps and moved to the University of Cincinnati to continue her training.

"I wanted a gun," she said, "but they gave me a needle. I shot every recruit in Ohio."

Eventually, Mary Lou was assigned to the theater in the Philippines, but the war ended before she could ship out. Her future husband, Dr. James Salter '49, whom she met at Berea, was stationed as a combat platoon leader in the Philippines. When he returned to Berea to finish his degree after the war, Mary Lou took a job as operating room supervisor at the nearby Pattie A. Clay Hospital, working for visiting surgeon and Berea graduate Dr. Hugh Mahaffey '24.

"In the 1940s, nothing was disposable except knife blades and sponges," she said. "All else had to be sterilized and reused."

One of only two Berea students to get into medical school in 1949, James, upon the recommendation of his chemistry professor, Dr. Julian Capps, enrolled at the University of Louisville. Mary Lou went with him, serving in the neurosurgery unit of Louisville's Veterans Administration hospital.

The couple devoted themselves to medicine in Kentucky and Ohio. Mary Lou served as the nurse in James' family practice in Mt. Sterling, Ky., before he went back to Louisville to specialize in obstetrics and gynecology. Eventually, James took a position at the medical school at Wright State University and Mary Lou taught health education in Fairfield, Ohio. She retired from the Ohio Board of Education after her two children were grown.

In 1978, James and Mary Lou re-settled in Richmond, where James could travel less by serving just one hospital. Mary Lou was appointed to the Foster Care Review Board and introduced scoliosis screening at Madison County Schools.

Mary Lou lost her parents at a young age, giving her a soft spot for children in need. She also adopted two babies, Greg and Cindy. While on the Foster Care Review Board, she reviewed case files to identify children who may have fallen through the cracks.

"I've always been interested in helping children," she said. "I want to give something back to children who need to see a light at the end of the tunnel."

I want to give something back to children who need to see a light at the end of the tunnel.

The desire to help young people in need extends to Berea's students. "My favorite part of Berea's mission is helping those who have potential and don't have another chance," she said. "Berea College is very special."

James died from leukemia in 2012. Mary Lou, a cancer survivor, dedicated the chemistry project lab in the Margaret A. Cargill Natural Sciences and Health building in his honor.

"Berea was a happy time in my life, and James felt like Dr. Capps got him into medical school," she said. "When God's been good to us, we have to pass it down the line to somebody else."

JOSÉ SOCARRAS

New Worlds and New Opportunities

By Jason Lee Miller

José Socarras '21 emigrated from Cuba to the United States when he was 2 years old. He and his mother followed his father, who had secured exit only for himself a year earlier and had to apply to bring the rest of his family in hopes of starting a new life together in America.

They came because while opportunities were scarce in Cuba, they were abundant on the continent. The family settled in Louisville, which has one of the fastest-growing Cuban populations in the country, joining relatives who could assist them in getting established. The language barrier meant Socarras' parents could not return to the professions they had in Cuba. His father, an artist, took up work in landscaping and in factories, though he kept a small art studio to continue his passion. His mother, a pharmacist, found employment in housekeeping at a local seminary.

"My parents always wanted to come here and knew it would be best for me in terms of education and environment," Socarras said. "Coming here was a huge difference, especially in terms of housing and food. In Cuba, there are a lot of shortages. The markets may not have chicken for three or four days. I was blessed and lucky to be able to come here at a young age."

Socarras joined his parents in United States citizenship at age 9. Growing up helping his father with art projects, it was only natural, when it came time for college, for Socarras to pursue an art degree. To go, however, he would need scholarships. Socarras earned a scholarship to a state university, but it was not enough to cover the expense fully, and Socarras feared his dream of obtaining a college education would not come true. Then he learned of Berea College.

I know the amount I'm giving might not be extraordinary, but giving that little bit encourages others to join, and collectively, we can all give back.

"If not for Berea," he said. "I wouldn't be in college. I wouldn't have the funds to attend. Berea really changes people's lives."

Berea did not change his mind about what he wanted to be, but the College did change his mind about how he wanted to be it. As a younger artist, he dreamed of fame and wealth, but his experience at school is persuading him toward new, nobler horizons.

"I want to do something with nonprofits, specifically with disadvantaged or troubled youth," he said. "I want to use art to help them as art has helped me in so many of my own situations and conflicts."

Since attending Berea, giving back has become a central theme in Socarras' life. He lists this desire as the reason he donates a small amount of his paycheck back to the College.

"I want to use the opportunity Berea has given me to work and study here to give back to my community and to future generations of Bereans. I know the amount I'm giving might not be extraordinary, but giving that little bit encourages others to join, and collectively, we can all give back."

BLAIR FRANK & TENA FISHMAN FRANK

A Bridge to Something Better

By Kim Brown

Luck and a second chance made all the difference for Blair Frank. Now, he's paying it forward.

"I came from what you would call a 'fractured family,'" Frank shared. "I was an emancipated minor in high school. So, I was living on my own, and I probably wouldn't have gone to college if it wasn't for the principal of my high school."

Dr. Robert Dunn—his principal in Hartford, Conn.—helped Frank get into Bates College, his alma mater. "I've always considered that sort of a second chance and an opportunity."

He made the most of that opportunity, earning a bachelor's degree in history, an MBA in finance from Northwestern University and beginning a career in the investment business that spans 24 years.

"In my career in investments, I've seen a lot of successful people," he said. "In most of their lives, there's been a bit of luck and some hard work. I have always thought I was lucky to have met the principal of my high school and to have gotten his help. I took that opportunity that he gave me, and I worked hard. It was a bridge for me to go on to graduate school and into my career."

Frank sees Berea College as a bridge to higher education that provides that chance to other deserving young persons.

He first learned of Berea while researching colleges that provide access to first-generation students. For the fall 2018 semester, 58 percent of Berea's new students were first-generation.

If they use that [opportunity] to work hard, Berea can be a bridge for them, for their families and for the communities where they will live.

"When I look at Berea, it's a special place," Frank said. "Obviously, the Tuition Promise Scholarship and the commitment to full access is unique. Every kid who gets into Berea is a lucky kid, and they are being given an opportunity. If they use that [opportunity] to work hard, Berea can be a bridge for them, for their families and for the communities where they will live. That's sort of the connection between me and Berea."

Frank is interested in supporting Berea's international students.

"I really think the international kids bring something important to the school," he said. "For a school of its size, I think the diversity of Berea is incredible."

International students are not eligible for federal grants and loans available to domestic students. Frank is interested in helping the College fund the gap for international students.

"My focus on philanthropy is on access to opportunity, access to education—particularly college—because it can be a bridge to something else, which it was for me," Frank said. "I give to a number of educational institutions and organizations that help students get to college, but I feel really good about every dollar I give to Berea."

Day of Thanks

CELEBRATING OUR FAITHFUL GIVERS

Generous alumni and friends who support Berea College gathered on campus for the Day of Thanks in mid-October. This special day was a chance for the College to celebrate those who make achieving Berea's mission possible with their contributions. The Day of Thanks featured workshops from campus staff and faculty such as Aaron Beale, Chris Miller, Judge Wilson II and Dr. Kathy Bullock. Attendees learned about the connections between African American and Appalachian music, were able to ask questions of the College attorney about estate planning, viewed Berea College and Appalachian artifacts from the College collection and saw a demonstration of Berea College's historic Student Craft.

Guests also took campus tours and attended dinner with student speakers Ishara Nanayakkara '20, Berea's Student Government Association president, and Star Clifton '20, who serves as the Campus Christian Center's service chaplain, with an aim to bringing spirituality and community service together. A jazz quintet made up of members of the Berea College Jazz Ensemble entertained the guests at dinner. About 60 alumni and friends visited campus for the occasion and were recognized for making Berea College an essential part of their philanthropy.

THE SEABURY FOUNDATION

Many gathered to celebrate the 1927 laying of the cornerstone of Seabury Center.

Approaching a Century of Support

By Tim Jordan '76

Thousands of Berea students and College visitors know the Seabury name. It is attached to prominent buildings on campus and awards for students and faculty. The connection goes back to the 1920s when Louise Seabury visited Berea while traveling on summer vacation. Impressed by Berea's mission, she insisted her husband, Charles Ward Seabury, visit the College on their next trip.

Their grandson and Berea College Trustee Dr. Charles "Chuck" Ward Seabury II says that according to family lore, his grandfather—having done well in his business and feeling charitable—made it known to then-president William J. Hutchins that he would like to do something to address a current need of the College. President Hutchins told him the most pressing need at the time was a facility for men's physical education and fitness. He and his wife agreed to fund construction of a well-equipped gymnasium for Berea. A 1927 article in the Berea Citizen noted that Mr. and Mrs. Seabury were attracted to Berea because of the College's "ideals which have stood the test of time."

The Stock Market crash of 1929 would test that commitment, but with "a great sacrifice" and some compromises on the architectural design of the gymnasium, they followed through. With that initial—and substantial—gift, the Seabury family began a long tradition of financial support for Berea College through the Seabury Foundation.

The Seabury Center, a first-class 106,996 square-foot facility that houses the College health, wellness and athletics programs; Seabury residence hall that is a home away from home for female students; the Charles Ward Seabury Fellowship for graduate studies; and Berea's highest faculty honor—the Seabury Award for Excellence in Teaching—all bear the name of a family and foundation whose support has been generous and longstanding.

"Berea is quite rare in what it is doing," said Bill Fisk, a Seabury descendant and chair of the Seabury Foundation. "The school has been very well supported. This was something our great grandfather supported and that's not, in my opinion, a sole reason to support something, but that has been given weight."

Since the initial meeting with President Hutchins in 1927, members of the Seabury family and their foundation have personally committed to the welfare of Berea College and its students. Beyond financial support, their steadfast loyalty has included serving on the College's Board of Trustees, beginning with Charles Ward Seabury. After his death, his son, John Seabury, joined the Board and remained actively involved until his death in 1988. Soon after, John's son, Chuck Seabury II, continued the family tradition by actively serving as a Berea trustee. Chuck also noted that his maternal grandfather, Grant Brown, was the commander in charge of the Navy V-12 unit in Berea during World War II. The V-12 program served the nation by providing well-educated naval officers, and the College by providing some financial stability at a critical time.

"Anyone who presumes to support educational opportunity as a means of social development and justice who does not pay attention to Berea College has missed the boat," Chuck said. "I look forward to many more years of connection with this worthy institution."

Dr. Charles "Chuck" Ward Seabury II

In September, a film crew from CNN spent several days on Berea's campus gathering footage, interviewing students and staff and taking in normal campus life for a long-form documentary, which aired in October. It showed Berea as a shining example of what is "right" in higher education, while also highlighting the College's unique mission and campus atmosphere.

Attention Special Reunion Classes of 1945, 1950, 1960, 1965,
 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985
 & 1990

We are looking for enthusiastic volunteers to lead a Reunion Giving Campaign in honor of your Summer Reunion (June 12-14, 2020)! To sign up to be a Reunion Giving Class Volunteer or to learn more, please visit:

Stephen Burks, Glenn Adamson and Aaron Beale presented Berea Craft: A Renewable Resource, at a September convocation. The three discussed the history and current tradition of craft making at Berea College and a new collaboration between Burks and the College focused on inclusive design that can sustain the mission of Berea well into the future.
