ONE^{1600 STORIES}

REMARKABLE MISSION

The Legacy Wall at John G. Fee Glade features the names of more than 3,000 alumni and friends of Berea College, now departed, who included Berea in their estate plans.

HOW YOUR STORY BECOMES HIS STORY

Every year at Berea College, 1600 stories get a new chapter.

In one story a door opens. In another, the wooded path forks. In either case, our young heroes face a world and an adventure they could not have imagined before.

What does this have to do with you?

You are the door that opens. You are the fork in the path. Without you, there is no story.

Naming Berea College in your estate plans or setting up a charitable annuity are just two ways your great story can become part of other great stories. To learn more about annuities, trusts, and bequests, contact the Office of Gift Planning at 800.457.9846, or visit us online at berea.edu/givetoberea.

OUR BEREА:

FROM EXPLORATION TO ACTION

Dear Berea Friends and Alumni,

Greetings from the Office of the President! I am pleased to present the 2013-14 President's Report and recommend it for your review.

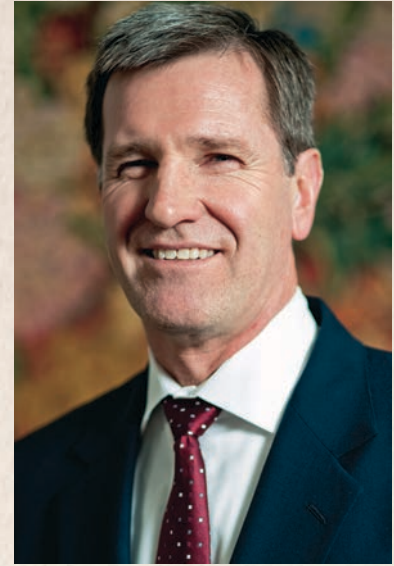

By Lyle D. Roelofs, President

The Report presents information about our solid financial position and data related to our sources of financial support. It also lists the names of the Berea College Board of Trustees and national alumni leaders, all of whom provide without compensation their time, their passion, their professional expertise, and their leadership to help guide this remarkable and transformative institution. In reading our report I am struck anew with amazement at just how many people help support and sustain the mission of Berea College as captured in its eight Great Commitments. Berea College could not continue that mission, could not even exist, absent the commitment of our supporters. On campus, we never forget that, not even for a moment.

It has been another rich year for Laurie and me, as we continue our work on campus and our travels to get to know this amazing extended community through its many intertwining stories. To those of you whose paths we crossed this year, we give thanks for your warm and gracious welcome and for sharing your Berea experiences. Aside from the inspiring mission of the college, the most enjoyable aspect of being involved in its leadership is hearing those stories, stories which if written down would constitute a book remarkable for its interest and its gravitas. Small wonder Berea College pays such close attention to its history!

As president, I find myself both surrounded and supported by Berea's past. Although at many institutions providing leadership means finding new directions, at Berea, I have found that the history of the institution often provides the most important leadership themes, themes embodied in the durable eight Great Commitments. While they were not written down in their approximate present form until the early 1960s, careful examination of the college's history confirms that they were in place earlier, with some extending all the way to the founding of the college. Still today the Commitments are an active part of daily life on campus.

In last year's report, I outlined the launch of a year-long set of conversations on campus, an initiative called "Our Berea—Exploring the Commitments." This work has been undertaken by eight Great Committees, as we are calling them, each focusing on one of the Great Commitments. I am happy to report that the work of the committees remains on schedule and will be complete by the end of the calendar year. Thanks to the dedication of the faculty, staff, and student volunteers, we will have a better shared understanding of each Commitment, a set of goals to guide our actions, and a clear sense of the resources we need to ensure our core values are reflected in all we do. Watching this work be done over the last year, it has been truly inspiring to see the dedication and excitement with which the work of the committees is pursued—not exactly the typical state of committee work in a college environment or any other!

The following pages highlight the contributions from and to our community that enable faculty and staff to continue to serve, and through serving, to pass the values of the Great Commitments on to the next generation. Wallace Nutting, the American printmaker and artisan who was so influential in our student crafts program, had a list of maxims, the last of which is, "Let nothing leave your hands until you are proud of the work." That is how we feel about the mission of Berea College. At Berea College all hands work together—the hands of faculty, staff, students, and our supporters—to proudly carry out a unique and compelling mission, one that boils down to making it possible for every last one of our students to achieve their goals.

In all of these efforts, the engagement and support of our alumni and friends remain vital. We hope you will join us and all other Life-Long Bereans in that rewarding participation in the community we call "Our Berea!"

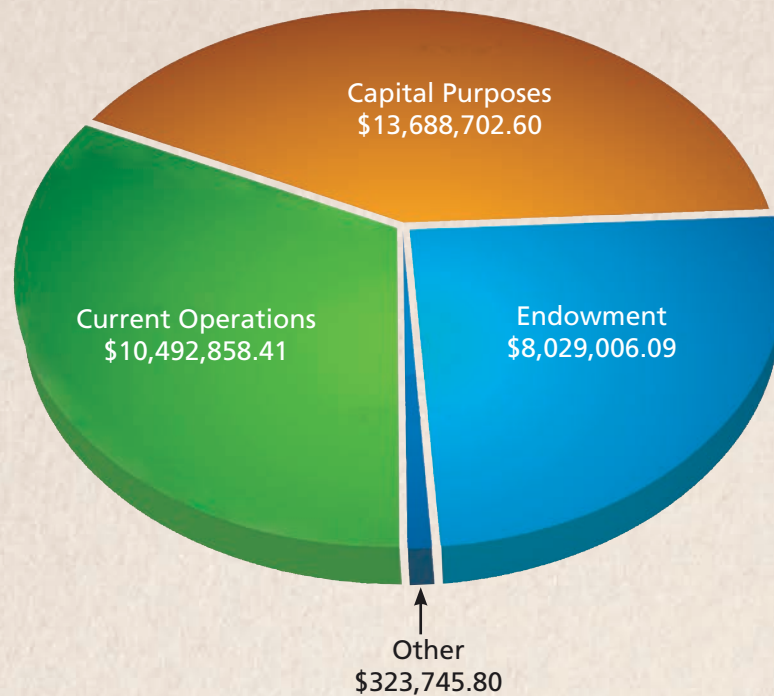

Warm regards,

A handwritten signature in blue ink, which appears to read "Lyle D. Roelofs". The signature is fluid and cursive, written over a light blue horizontal line.

HOW DOES BEREA MAKE THE IMPOSSIBLE POSSIBLE?

Amy C. Shehee, '91, Esq.

Have you ever wondered how it's possible for a college to provide a high-quality education to over 1,600 students without charging tuition? How it pays its professors and staff, funds its programs, or even keeps the lights on?

Certainly, anyone starting a college today using such a business model would be cautioned against it as an impossible, idealistic undertaking.

Yet that's exactly what Berea has been doing for generations. And doing it well.

How has Berea made the impossible a reality? Very simply. Through the generosity of supporters who have included Berea in their estate plans. Berea as we know it—a liberal arts college that provides full-tuition scholarships to all its students—would not exist without the estate gifts it has received from alumni and friends over its nearly 160 year history.

Supporters who ultimately give to Berea through an estate gift help Berea in the most fundamental and critical way. They enable the college to do what would otherwise be impossible for those bright students with limited finances who need it most: provide educational opportunity and access without the burden of tuition.

While other colleges and universities receive estate gifts just like Berea, the reason they make such a difference here is due to pivotal decisions reached in Berea's early years of operation.

In 1893 the College received a $6,000 estate gift that enabled Berea to keep its doors open during some very difficult financial times. Reflecting on this significant bequest, then Berea President William Goodell Frost stated: "That money was used to live upon. From that good time we have never been obliged to eat our bequests. All the bequests since then have gone into permanent things" (College address, April 14, 1915).

The practice of using estate gifts for "permanent things" became policy in 1920 with a resolution of Berea's Board of Trustees unprecedented in higher education—all estate gifts that were not designated for a particular purpose would be added to the College's endowment. This policy remains in effect today.

This policy, coupled with the estate gifts provided by alumni and friends, has enabled Berea's endowment to grow. And that is how Berea has made the impossible possible. In lieu of tuition, annual income from the endowment provides roughly 75% of Berea's operational expenses, enabling the college to offer full-tuition scholarships to all of its students.

Many are surprised to learn about Berea's unique funding model, but they are even more surprised to learn about those wonderful supporters who make it possible. Some assume that only the wealthiest donors or those without children make such gifts, when in fact most come from average individuals whose primary estate planning goal is to provide for their loved ones. Others hold the common misconception that only the largest estate gifts make a difference, when in reality Berea has benefitted from relatively modest gifts from a broad base of individuals.

Another common misconception is that an estate gift to Berea is a complex process that necessarily involves lawyers and legal fees. While some of the estate gifts to Berea do come in the form of a bequest provision through a will or trust, others are in the form of a life insurance policy, IRA, 401K or savings account and only require the completion and submittal of a form naming Berea a beneficiary or partial beneficiary.

Regardless of the way or means, we are grateful to all those who have included

Amy C. Shee, '91

Berea in their estate plans, past and present, young and "young at heart." (currently the youngest individual is a recent graduate, and the youngest at heart are centennials.) We're so grateful, in fact, a legacy wall on campus—the only one of its kind in the country—lists every individual who honored Berea in this very meaningful way. Because of these individuals, Berea can make the impossible possible for generations of students to come. And their legacies will live on in the aspirations and achievements of Berea's students.

Remember, if Berea is in your estate plans but you've never let us know, please consider doing so. We'd love to welcome you into our Great Commitments Society.

And if you'd like to explore the possibility of leaving an estate gift to Berea, contact me at 800.457.9846 ext. 3002 or via email at amy_shehee@berea.edu. There's never any pressure and we'd love to have you join the ranks of the women and men who have helped make the impossible a reality at Berea.

A PRIVILEGE AND A CHALLENGE

President Lyle Roelofs, Associate Vice President for Development Joanne Singh, and Director of Alumni Relations Diane Kerby

“Without tuition income, Berea must rely heavily on gifts from caring alumni and friends. We celebrate all those who give, and thank them for their kindness and support.”

—Joanne Singh, Associate Vice President for Development

Every year, we have the privilege to work with and educate 1,600 students, each with their own unique and remarkable journey to Berea. They have overcome economic difficulties, limited educational resources, discrimination, and sometimes much more to get here. Their strength, energy, and desire to succeed inspire and challenge us daily.

They challenge us to provide the resources necessary not just to succeed in an increasingly complex and competitive global economy but also to become economic leaders emboldened and strengthened by the values underpinning our Great Commitments. Of course, we face this challenge with the help of friends and alumni of the college, who believe in the transformative potential of our students and our institution.

The Berea College Honor Roll of Giving is about more than financial support. It is a statement of shared belief in the power of young people to change the world. It recognizes the bond between all Berea students, past, present, and future, whose personal and professional lives will always benefit from the world-class education they received here. It stands as also a testament to our generous friends, whose support reveals that Berea College, in the words of the late President John B. Stephenson, is still a great, transcendent idea that “enlarges the souls of all who learn of it.”

If, like us, you are inspired by these students, then we hope you will continue to rise to the challenge of providing them an education grounded in learning, service, and impartial love.

President's Club

July 1, 2013-June 30, 2014

Beginning with the 2003-04 fiscal year, criteria for membership in the President's Club changed. Lifetime memberships to the President's Club are now conferred to those who have already contributed $20,000 or more to Berea College or indicate their intention of contributing $2,000 annually until $20,000 has been reached (including past donations).

By Jacob Appleman, '15

Throughout its existence, alumni of Berea College have expressed their gratitude for the gift of education they received by donating back to the institution. Motivated by the desire to ensure another deserving student will have the same opportunities they have been afforded, they have been an essential element in preserving the mission of the college. In recent years, some students have been motivated to start giving long before graduation. The group, called the Berea Patrons, shows their gratitude to the college by making, and encouraging their peers to make, donations of at least $5 a year. Many of them even register to give $1-20 of their paycheck each pay period. The goal for the group is to raise $5,000 per year. This is enough to pay off the remaining cost of two student tuitions after endowment monies have been applied. In 2013-2014, the Berea Patrons surpassed their goal, having raised $6,181 from students.

The Berea Patrons program began as informal gatherings of students who wanted to 'give back' to Berea. Many were members of the Student Alumni Council and were quite aware of Berea's financial needs. "It was a student initiative," says Candis Arthur, '11, "and it really got started when students started to become very passionate about this project." With the support of faculty, staff, and administration, Berea Patrons moved forward as an initiative with Candis as one of the early advisors. Candis was brought in because she had been working with the Young Alumni giving club, "it was an obvious connection to my work, educating students about how Berea's funding operates. Says Candis, "Student philanthropy was exciting to me because it was an obvious connection to alumni giving, to educate the students while they are here." Through Berea Patrons, she hopes that student philanthropy will blossom into alumni giving, to ensure the future of Berea and to keep this institution, which transforms so many lives, up and running.

This group is now guided by new staff member Lisa Colletti-Jones in Alumni Relations, and it is her aim to increase the awareness of the "funding gap" and just how much Berea College is kept afloat by the gifts of alumni, friends, and now students. Lisa is the advisor of the Student Alumni Council, campus group responsible for making student-alumni connections, especially relating to the funding of our college. She helps the Berea Patrons leadership team market to the student body, creating events to garner interest in the group's purpose. She says, "We are currently planning for a booth at Mountain Day and an October 30th kick-off event. We hope to raise $5,000 dollars this year and to have 400 student donors. In the next 3-5 years I would love to see 50-60% of the student body giving gifts from their labor earnings."

Because Berea students pay no tuition, their education depends heavily on endowment income and Berea Fund gifts. This year, our endowment will pay 73% of annual operating costs. Berea Fund gifts help cover the remainder. Gifts of all sizes are critical in raising the $4,350,000 needed for the Berea Fund this year. Every gift that supports the Berea Fund supports all that Berea is and does. Items supported include full-tuition scholarships, faculty salaries, theater costumes, and scientific lab equipment, which are all essential for the learning process. Because of this, Candis explains, Berea Patrons' purpose is threefold: "to educate the students about Berea's funding, to learn the importance and value of giving back, and to be aware and thankful of the many donors, alumni, friends, and students, who make it possible for students to be here."

Berea Patron student leader, Cory Payton, '15, talks about his reason for giving: "I serve as part of the Student Alumni Council because I feel it is important to give back to the place that has given me so much." Berea Patron Iliana Lomeli, '16, spoke about her connection with this group and its deep importance to her life mission:

Even though I have little, I can give what I can for the future of others. A little grain of sand can go a long way, this is my grain of sand that will aid in paving the future for people like myself who show academic promise but do not necessarily have the means to receive a higher education.

It is because of Berea's kindness and far reaching vision that students are inspired to reciprocate, in whatever way that they can, to keep this college alive. Every member of the Berea Patrons program looks forward to expanding this group and its influence in the future, and hopes that their contributions will grow into a pillar of support for Berea's mission.

DOUBLE THE DONATION

Did you know many companies match employee donations?

CORPORATE MATCHING GIFTS

CORPORATE EMPLOYEE MATCHING GIFT

By Scott Tracey, Director of Corporate Giving

What are corporate matching gift programs?

Corporate matching gift programs are charitable giving programs setup by corporations in which the company matches donations made by employees to eligible nonprofit organizations. For example, if you work for Bank of America and donate $100 to Berea, Bank of America will double the donation by also writing a check for $100.

Thousands of companies offer matching gift programs. A few examples include:

- Johnson & Johnson – Triples donations with $2:$1 matches for current employees while also doubling donations for retirees.
- IBM – Matches donations $1:$1 up to $5,000 annually per employee or retiree.
- Home Depot – Matches donations $1:$1 up to $3,000 annually per employee.

The impact of these programs can be substantial! In 2011, Microsoft alone matched $48.9 million worth of employee donations to colleges, schools and 501(c)(3) nonprofits. Did you know that more than 15 million employees work for companies with matching gift programs?

How did corporate matching gifts get started?

According to the Council for Advancement & Support for Education, Philip Reed, chair of General Electric's board of directors, introduced the first-ever matching gift program in 1954. It's unlikely, however, that anyone could have predicted the impact his idea would have on the philanthropic landscape. In the program's first year, the GE Foundation matched nearly $200,000 in employee gifts to higher education—a success by any measure. Since then, thousands of companies have contributed billions of dollars to education and other nonprofits via corporate matches.

Reed's idea, groundbreaking at the time, stemmed from his desire to see GE employees support their alma maters. He believed his employees would be more likely to give to colleges and universities if the company matched their gifts and that such gifts ultimately would benefit the company because they would help create a better-educated work force. His idea is still working at Berea as we have had 10 matching gifts from GE in the last two years.

Over time, the matching gift concept evolved into a widespread practice that showcases companies' efforts to be socially responsible, improves employee relations, promotes broad-based philanthropy, and makes giving flexible. Although matching gifts generally represent a small fraction of an institution's overall gift income, they can add up to hundreds of thousands—or even millions—of dollars those institutions otherwise would not have received.

Does Berea accept corporate matching gifts?

Absolutely. Increasing our fundraising from matching gifts can be easy and impactful—with your help. Last year we received 124 matching gifts which helped us raise an additional $93,925. Even though less than 1% of our friends completed matching gifts, their action helped complete the full scholarships of almost 40 worthy students. We know many of our supporters and alumni work for companies with matching gift programs and we've set a goal of raising $125,000 from these programs this year. If we meet our goal, we'll be able to provide the full-tuition scholarship opportunity to more deserving students who would not otherwise have the chance to pursue their dream of obtaining a college education.

2014 Top 5 Corporate Matching Gifts

Gifts in Dollars		Gifts by Number
1. ExxonMobil	$24,900	1. General Mills	8
2. Procter & Gamble	$10,300	2. ExxonMobil	6
3. General Mills	$9,700	3. Boeing Company	5
4. Abbott Laboratories	$5,075	4. Eli Lilly and Company	5
5. Norfolk Southern	$3,600	5. Pfizer	4

PROGRAMS AND HOW THEY BENEFIT BEREA

WOULD YOU LIKE YOUR GIFT TO HELP BEREA EVEN MORE?

You can immediately assess your eligibility and gain access to detailed corporate giving information about your employer by searching our database of companies with matching gift programs at <http://www.matchinggifts.com/berea/>.

We provide you with as much of the following as possible:

- Up-to-date company policies
- Printed forms or links to the online submission process
- Our nonprofit's contact information (Tax ID, address, fundraising contact)

It's nearly impossible to identify every company with a matching program, so if your company isn't listed on our website, make sure to check with your Human Resources department as there are additional companies who also offer matching grant programs. And some companies, such as IBM and Johnson & Johnson, even provide matching gifts for their retirees as well.

We wish we could submit the required form for everyone to make it as simple as possible, but unfortunately the employee must submit the request. We know you care about Berea's students and would appreciate you taking five minutes to double the impact of your support.

STEP

Find out if your employer matches gifts.

STEP

Fill out your employer's form.

STEP

THANKS!

Follow your employer's instructions to submit the form.

CLASS NOTES

The Berea College Alumni Association enjoys hearing from Bereans from all over the U.S. and the world. The "Class Notes" section of Berea College Magazine reports verifiable news that has been sent to the Association by alumni. BCM reports the news you wish to share with your alumni friends and associates. "Class Notes" reports careers, weddings, retirements, births, and other items of importance to our alumni. Please include your class year and name used while attending Berea. Notes may be edited for style and length. Our print deadlines may delay the appearance of your class news. While we will make every effort to put your information into the next issue, due to printing schedules, some delays are typical. We appreciate your understanding. Submit class notes and photographs via e-mail: alumninews@berea.edu.
